

RUSS RENEW ATTACKS ON EAST FRONT

DENSE MASSES OF SLAV TROOPS MAKE DETERMINED ATTACKS IN BUCKOVINA.

GERMANS ALSO ACTIVE

Attempt Serious But Futile Offensive at Extreme Northern End of Line—Russian's Theater Mitau.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, Dec. 30.—Although Petrograd remains silent on the subject, the public is inclined to believe the Russian is undertaking a great offensive in Bukovina near the Besarabian border. Official successful reports telling of attacks by dense masses of Russian troops, indicate an important battle is under way.

The fighting center is at a point near Toporoutz, a small town just within the border of northern Bukovina but a simultaneous attack is being made along an extended front reaching from the Pruth to a position north of the Dniester, a distance of about forty miles.

The latest advices state that the Russian assault is being continued, accompanied by an equally heavy bombardment.

Official reports from the extreme northern portion of the eastern front state the Germans have made a serious but futile attack in the region of Lake Hahit, while the Russians, west of Lake Kanagar, are retreating.

These opposing attacks create a delicate situation, and a successful advance by either would endanger considerable forces of the defeated opponent.

Fighting in Vosges. Along the western front except for mining and aerial engagements on the British lines, the chief fighting seems to be confined to the Vosges, where the French chief of Harmanus, Weierkott, the French chief, has made a successful advance. Berlin officially minimizes this success but does not deny it wholly.

Along the Italian front, the change in the Macedonian positions but it is generally believed that any advance by the Bulgarians, the opinion being made by the German press, cannot come against Saloniki.

Domestic tension in England, over the conscription question, has been greatly reduced. Speculation continues concerning the method which is to be adopted to reach eligible unmarried men a majority agreeing that the Derby plan of attestation will be extended for that purpose.

Berlin Announcement. Berlin, Dec. 30.—Heavy fighting continues in the Vosges. Announcement is made by the war office that positions near Harmanus-Weierkott have been reconquered by the Germans. A British surprise attack was made near Lake and failed.

Member of Newfoundland Regiment Rewarded for Bravery in Action at Dardanelles.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 30.—James Joseph, a dry goods clerk in this city, today is the war hero most prominently in the eyes of the colony. As lieutenant of a Newfoundland battalion in action at the Dardanelles, he acquitted himself so well in a hazardous situation that King George awarded him the military cross. News of the exploit was received by Governor Davidson today. On the night of December 19, 1915, he led the patrol to a knoll held by the Turks. He forced their superior numbers to withdraw, and although his little party was considerably reduced, held to the position through the night, notwithstanding several Turkish counter-attacks. When morning came half his force was dead or wounded. The position was consolidated with the British lines, and named Caribou Hill, in recognition of the Caribou head on the Newfoundland regimental crest.

GERMAN EFFICIENCY LEADS TO SUCCESS

Elimination of Idle and Aristocratic Classes Responsible for Ascendancy Over England and France.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Dec. 30.—Germany's greater efficiency as compared with Great Britain and France in the present war, says the English Evening News, is due to the fact that in Germany aristocratic classes have been largely done away with and that had led to relative industrial superiority.

"I believe the influence of the aristocratic and class control of the German state on the industry of that country has probably been a factor that has been done German by thinkers is more than compensated for by the pernicious influence and dead weight of enormous and firmly rooted wealth."

Great Britain and France, largely idle idleness at best and in almost every instance given over to foolish and unproductive and colossal dimensions, they have absorbed very large part of nation's income and industrial power. Political economy has not failed in these countries, it is well known what to do with its successes.

RACINE WOMAN PAID MONEY AND JEWELS TO SHIELD HERSELF

Wife of Prominent Case Company Official Tells Sensational Story Implicating A Milwaukee Man.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Milwaukee, Dec. 30.—How an automobile accident figured in the lives of two persons, was related in district court today in a case which teemed with scenes of bitterness and pleadings. During the case a woman bared her life history, at times becoming defiant and then again wringing her hands in abject misery.

The wife of Case official. The characters in the trial were Violet Adams, wife of a high official of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company of Racine, and Anton Anderson, a well known Milwaukeean. The woman charged Anderson with having extorted money and jewelry of her under threats of making damaging statements to her husband.

Mrs. Adams, who was born in France and reared in a private school in Winnipeg, made most interesting witness. At times she matched wits with Attorney Frank Fawcett and then again she sank limply into her chair and wept.

During the trial the emotion of her hands to her face in the cup of which tore at her heart. Mrs. Adams was walking near the terminal building here last fall when a motor car of Anderson's brushed her over. Anderson helped her to her feet and placed her in the car, dashed to Fifth street and Grand Avenue so she could catch up with the interurban car.

Effort was made to keep the fire a secret, according to Mr. Catlin. The plant was saved when several of the workmen snuffed out the blazing section from another part of the building where a great quantity of nitroglycerine was stored.

Bring in Pack of Letters. A pack of fifteen letters was introduced by Mr. Fawcett, which the woman identified as having sent. The contents of the letters were not revealed in court, although Mrs. Adams identified all of them. Mention was made, however, of a check mortgage of her furniture which the woman had made out to Anderson in the sum of $300.

met this man on September 10 in a confectionary store at 5th and Grand Avenue. Mrs. Adams testified "He threatened to go to my husband and tell him I had been immoral. He said if I did not have any effect, he would blow me full of holes, and he had a diamond bar pin and also ten dollars, so he would not tell anyone."

Mrs. Adams said she was born in France and when a child went to Denver with her father. After attending a private school in Canada she said she went to Europe and later came to this country, going to Duluth and also Racine. The case was adjourned to later in the afternoon.

CONVENTION URGES NEED FOR GREATER PAN-AMERICANISM

Teach More Americanism and Less Nationalism Is Principle Emphasized at Today's Sessions.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Dec. 30.—Pleas for a greater Pan-Americanism were numerous today in the program of the Pan-American Scientific Congress in spite of great volume of papers read on technical subjects. Scores of questions of an international character were discussed and members of the congress informally talked of the crystallization of the Pan-American idea into a concrete form that might become known as the Pan-American alliance.

A Pan-American congress that had for its one object the co-ordination of the principle of general agitation for the whole continent with the fundamental idea of giving special importance to the reciprocal knowledge of the American nations, was suggested by Mrs. Ernestine A. Lohz de Nelson of Argentina. Addressing the congress on education she said that more Americanism and less nationalism should be taught the children of both North and South America.

"The education now given to the children of America," she declared, "does not prepare them for the Pan-American feeling of brotherhood which is so essential, but it teaches them with false conceptions and predisposes them to look on the American neighbors with suspicion. Certain prejudices exist between the American nations which make them see each other in a false light. One reason is that we always compare our neighbors with the traditional European models instead of giving to each nation its own individual worth."

Knowledge of governmental administration is important for women, asserted Mrs. Sophonisba Breckenridge of the University of Chicago, because they must rely on this as a condition for efficient household management. Women and girls have availed themselves of the educational opportunities which have opened them, she said, adding there was no reason to believe they would not respond to opportunities more closely related to current demands.

Lansing Submits Plan. Secretary Lansing has suggested to all the nations, which with the Pan-American union, that they join in the convention for arbitration of all boundary disputes and for prohibition of shipments of war munitions to revolutionaries.

Secretary Lansing's proposal which has the full support of President Wilson is being forwarded by Latin American ambassadors and ministers here to their home foreign offices for consideration. It is regarded as one of the steps in a wide plan in which the Pan American scientific congress here to meet, is a part for preservation of peace on the continent and closer union of all the Americans.

No Even Selling Chart

Markets in different sections of this continent differ.

Some parts consume more food products than others, while sales elsewhere will show a higher percentage for dry goods.

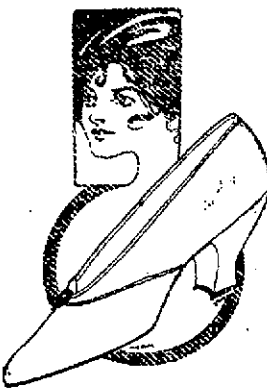

These things demonstrate the peculiar strength of the newspaper as an advertising medium.

The selling force can be directed where possibilities are largest.

It can be adapted to the season. No advertising need be wasted.

There is little or no guess work—and through its intensiveness in results it secures the co-operation of local dealers.

WOODS THAT ARE VALUABLE

Many Countries Contribute Varieties
In Great Demand for Various Purposes.

Rosewood is the name applied to the wood of different trees in their respective countries, so the commercial rosewood is not always the same. The rosewood of Brazil is considered the finest in every way, and is made into beautiful furniture.

The myrtle tree, a common one in Palestine, is useful because its leaves are used for sachet powders, and from it an oil is obtained which is used in perfume. The myrtle is an emblem of the Jewish feast of the passover and is mentioned several times in the Bible.
It is not a large tree, for 20 feet is usually its maximum height.

Ebony of the best quality comes from India, Ceylon and other tropical countries, where it is obtained in logs sometimes 15 and 20 feet long. The darkness of the wood increases with the age of the tree. It is a very hard wood and hence it is desirable for furniture making. Its unique color, too, makes it always worthy of notice, and it was combined with ivory by the Greeks to bring out its color.

Satinwood is produced both in the East and West Indies, and, indeed, an inferior variety comes from Florida. It is another very hard wood, of fine, light grain—almost canary yellow in color. It is used for cabinet work and nowadays very largely for the backs of their brushes and clothes brushes. It takes a very high, satiny polish.

LAKOTAS SCORE WIN BY A SINGLE POINT OVER RED WING FIVE

Defeats Minnesota Champions 27 to 26
Last Night — Atwood Scores Seven Baskets and Wins Game.

Playing the fastest and fiercest game ever staged at Red Wing, Minnesota, the Lakotas Cardinals triumphed last night by the score of 26 to 27, winning the game with a long basket in the last four seconds of play.
Both halves of the game were marked by rough playing, the Red Wing five being twenty pounds heavier than the Lakotas and the equal of them in drilling.

Little Atwood starred, scoring seven goals over the star guard of the Minnesota champions, Delbert, reports state, played his usual star game and his defensive work enabled the Lakotas to put over their second victory of the year.

Red Wing lead from the start and had the edge on the score at the end of the first half. Coming back with a burst of speed the Lakotas evened up the match from Red Wing's lead. The two teams battled with all their strength and power to break the tie. Atwood scored the final basket with a long shot. Raymond Bider played in the game but was not at his best, having a wrenched ankle and one scored two goals. Korst scored two baskets and Hemming counted three over Hawkins, the Pond du Lac giant. The disturbance of the game came near losing the contest for the Cardinals and but for exceptional goal shooting in the second half the Janesville five would have been beaten.

The Lakotas play the Red Wing team again tonight.

OUR CONGRESS.
It is significant that the south controls the committee chairmanship in the present session of congress. True, this is perhaps partially due to the fact that the southern states are known as the democratic strongholds but behind that is another factor which the Nation calls attention to in the following pithy statement that the predominance of the South in assignments to committees at Washington does not promise much in the way of a republican issue. Of the fifty-five standing committees in the House, thirty-one have southern chairmen, and twenty-two have southern members. But, as the Atlanta Constitution remarks, the division of important chairmanships is a fair one, and, "if political strength and political loyalty be considered, the South receives no more than its fair share of the honors, a little bit less." One reason for this preponderance is that the South has the habit of keeping a man at Washington term after term, with the result that its members are apt to surpass others in seniority of service and thus be at the head of the line when chairmanships are to be awarded. Of the Northern states only Maine has been consistently at the same time, the solidarity of the South has worked against its own interests. Its vote was taken for granted, with the result that a democratic triumph like that of Cleveland meant more for the party in the North than in the section where it was regularly strongest. Another factor of more or less influence was the persistence of sectional feeling, which made it harder for a democratic administration of Northern ties to place many members from the South in the seats of the mighty than is the case today. The war with Spain may have to its credit a definite lessening of this feeling, although the real or fancied dragging in of the "issue" in the recent re-election of Senator Clarke of Arkansas as president pro tem of the senate shows how long it takes to end it. Certainly it is high time that the North stopped speaking of the South as if it were in some way tinged with hyphenism.

CENTERS OF CRIME.
The numbers, growth, and power of the criminal class is a matter of serious concern. Mayor Thompson of Chicago set out a few days ago to purge that city's police department of crime, he charged collusion with grafters, and issued drastic threats. About the same kind of work is needed in many of the big cities. Robberies, hold-ups, and murders grow more numerous and immune from punishment.
The police forces of large cities are the vulnerable point in our system of crime suppression. It is worth more money to a police official to stand in with the crooks than to play straight, assuming that he is smart enough to cover his tracks. That is quite a big "if." But many grafters are disposed to change it. Higher salaries for police officials might not help the thing. They might make the work even more attractive to the dishonest.
The most serious feature is not the losses through the more sensational crimes. The demoralization of a police department by the presence of easy money renders a force less sincere and less serious in repression of deadly vices. Also every successful big break incites a wave of small crime all over the country. For every big burglary, a score of weaker and less capable men are likely to be lured into sneak thieving or petty swindling.
A police official who trades with crime commits moral treason against his city, state, and country. His act may have such obvious results as that of the traitor who sells out his country in war. But the insidious deed has its own far-reaching influence, and tends to the breaking up of homes and ruining of lives.
Moral strength is not the most important qualification for a police official. A small man physically, who is square and loyal and above money temptation or political pull, is the most valuable of all.

THE PAST YEAR.
It is customary for many newspapers at the close of a year, to print a record of events happening in the twelve months. These reviews are instructive, but at best they convey little suggestion of the real spirit of a period of time.
History seems one long record of wars, battles, personal conflicts of kings and emperors. These are not the most vital facts. The really significant events are the progress of education, individual liberty, political democracy, scientific discovery, technical arts, invention, economic prosperity of the common people, advance of moral ideas. The historian may not say much on some of these points. What will be the great events of 1915, as seen by the future historian? They would not be any battles, for these have not been decisive. The triumphs of armies, candidates, parties, laws, often seem at the time to mark a great era and assure human betterment, yet such hopes often prove illusory. Real progress is very intangible, a thing of the human spirit.

It would seem as if 1915 and its events must strongly emphasize one idea, the value of systematic, disciplined organization, working in unity for community ends. Disciplined unity has enabled Germany to win marvelous successes. It has enabled France, with its smaller population, to make a showing that many people would have thought impossible for a democratic country. Lack of unity and discipline has made the English results disastrous.
This is an idea that applies to the greatest nation and the smallest village alike. Negative criticism destroys power. The people who seek their own advancement, regardless of how such advancement affects the whole community, defeat their own ends. They share in the ill results of the community inefficiency which they do so much to bring about.

After Christmas some merchants advertise their surplus stock, turn it into cash, and put in new goods. Others carefully lay the old stuff away until next year, without making any effort to turn it, and then they complain of dull times.
Not merely did the people who got gifts off early this year save overworked postal and express employees much labor, but the presents reached their destination in such good season that the recipients had to send something in return.

Who says the magazines are not contributing to popular uplift, when nearly 10,000 girls write to a popular periodical this year, asking for information as to how they can make themselves more beautiful?
After denouncing the government for not making better military preparation, some employers of labor will proceed to turn down applicants for work because they want a little time off in summer to attend militia camp.
Some people's idea of peace and good will to men at Christmas tide is placing every eighth person under obligations to hug and around and send them gifts in return next year.

It is reported from the crowded stores in the big cities that pickpockets have captured many purses this year, but it is not stated whether there is much of anything in them.
Some people think the money spent in Christmas decorations should be given to the poor but so far as noticed none of these critics has circulated a subscription paper for that charitable purpose.
Do you suppose that now the President will have to get up out of bed and go down in his stocking feet to assure Mrs. M. that he has locked the White house front door?
Great indignation is expressed by the girls at the way those branches of misfortune get accidentally mixed in with the Christmas decorations.
The failure of those generals to gain any ground creates almost as much indignation in England as when one of our fielders muffs a fly ball.
The English government seems to be highly successful in putting its troops in safe places where the enemy can't get at them.
The people who pay cash for everything are firmly convinced that every bank check should be required to have an internal revenue stamp.

The Christmas contributions in the churches give some people a very favorable chance to get rid of plugged coins.
The necessity of lowering the income tax exemption to $2,000 is being patriotically advocated by all having incomes of $1,999 and under.
Some of these $3.00 an hour dancing teachers of last season can now get jobs tending door in skating rink.
Over in Europe they will fight, bleed and die to preserve the sacred right of killing women and babies.

In and Out of Hamburg.
Get-Quick Squallingford dropped off the train at the little town of Hamburg at one in the afternoon. At quarter to two he was in his suite in the Hamburg House surrounded by eleven of the town's wealthiest citizens.
"Gentlemen and astute business men," Squallingford was saying, "must take the 2:20 train back to New York, where my little office building is, so that gives you only thirty-five minutes to buy shares in the Hamburg Consolidated Dental Corporation, limited. Gentlemen, the scheme is this: Possibly you have been wondering what these four big barrels contain. They contain two thousand pounds of the Squallingford Dental structure caramels, gentlemen. These caramels can be chewed but not eaten—they are indestructible. The Hamburg Consolidated Dental Corporation, limited, will sell, give and throw these caramels away till every human being in Hamburg is liberally supplied. Now, gentlemen, these caramels are so made that they are guaranteed to pull out of the cheever's teeth the most fully inserted fillings, either gold, enamel or wooden. The filling-less inhabitants will then rush to the Dental Corporation to have the new fillings put in, and on their way out of the offices they will be presented with more indestructible caramels, so that business will be an unceasing stream. Step on out a time, gentlemen, four dollars a share."
It was not till Squallingford was on the 2:20 outbound train with $880 of Hamburg's money that the eleven citizens remembered that there was neither a dentist nor a filled tooth in Hamburg.
Clean wiping rags free from buttons and hooks bring 3 1/2c lb. at the Gazette office.

ROY K. MOULTON
My Baby.
(A poem for every father.)
I've heard a lot of babies squall,
I've heard 'em east and west,
But, after hearing of 'em all,
I like my kid's yell best.
It doesn't worry me a bit,
For every time I hear
Him tune up to his heart's content,
It's music to my ear.
Your own kid's voice is always sweet,
No matter what the key;
In all the world no one can sing
So charmingly as he.
You think it's cute when your own child
Cuts loose with night and morn;
It always is the neighbor's kind
That drives you half insane.

Uncle Abner.

AUSTRIANS RAISE IMMENSE SUMS FOR CHARITY PURPOSES
About Forty-eight Million Dollars Raised in Austria-Hungary for the Needy Civilians and Soldiers.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Vienna, Dec. 30.—Enormous sums of money have been collected in Austria-Hungary for charitable purposes during the war. No reliable figures on the total obtained are yet obtainable, but estimates place it as high as $40,000,000. Much of this money has been applied already, but large sums are still available for the needs of those for whom it was collected.
The money has been raised in every manner the fertile brains of social leaders and newspaper editors could devise. Charity teas and suppers; the sale of needlework done by society people; benefit performances at the theatres; the public sale of art objects which people were willing to donate; and a hundred similar enterprises have been carried out. The plain subscription and collection campaigns waged by the newspapers. At present an art exhibition sale is in progress, from which both the admission fees and the proceeds of the sale will go to the fund for relief of the needy. Some of the foremost painters of the country have contributed to the collection, and while many of the pictures are of unknown men and women, there is not one in the lot that does not have merit of a high order. Going on at the same time are several other similar campaigns. On the war by the Austro-Hungarian German war correspondents, invalided officers and statesmen.
All social classes take an interest in the work, and a remarkable feature of it is the instance of collections has left the arduous organizers and of the public almost undiminished. Constantly new schemes are being worked out, and the recent ones assuming the character of self-help and self-reliance in small amounts. Of these a ten-cents (two cents) tax on all bills is probably the most successful.
The Vienna Neue Presse has been the most remarkable. It has included the raising of large sums for blind veterans, for prisoners of war, for Christian soldiers, for the supply of artificial limbs, for the Bulgarian and Austrian Red Cross, for the tubercular soldiers, for widows and orphans, for assistance to needy artists, fugitives from the southern theatre of the war, for increasing the submarine fleet, and numerous other specific purposes.
A prominent Budapest newspaper, Az Est, has collected nearly 2,000,000 crowns to help the people of the Carpathians and northern Hungary to rebuild their villages which had been destroyed during occupation by the Russians. A clever scheme was devised for this collection. It is customary in Hungary to make presents to a woman on a day carrying out a man's coffin. For instance on St. Mary's day, all Marys in Hungary are remembered by their friends. Az Est suggested that the money to be spent in this way be turned over to the village-building fund.
Much of the money that is being collected is the fruit of little self-denials. A single day's list showing such entries as follows:
"Instead of buying a new dress, 200 crowns; in place of birthday presents for my father, 80 crowns; instead of flowers for the grave of Captain —, 100 crowns; give some satisfaction in an affair of honor, 200 crowns; for the birth of a son, 200 crowns."
There is no doubt that Austria-Hungary's population, without distinction to class, has come loyally to the support of those in the field and their families, and those whom the war has deprived temporarily of means of livelihood. The change of Red Cross and similar funds between Austria-Hungary and Germany has been solely a matter of matter of courtesy between allies. Austria-Hungary has already spent the greater part of a million crowns in Red Cross work in Bulgaria. It has sent military equipment and supplies worth over a million crowns to Turkey, and even in Poland and Hungary charity work has been done. As soon as conditions in Serbia permit it is understood that money and supplies will be sent there also.

ENGLISH MUSEUM IS GIVEN RARE JEWELS FROM BIG COLLECTION.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Dec. 30.—The British Museum has just received as a gift one of the finest private collections of precious stones in Great Britain. It was gathered by the late Sir Arthur Herbert Church, for many years president of the Mineralogical Society, and discoverer of several new minerals. And author of numerous important scientific works.
The collection consists of more than two hundred stones, mostly mounted in rings, and every specimen unique. Sir Arthur devoted his attention particularly to the products of Ceylon and for many years was to secure the pick of the rarer species of gem that came to light there. To the minerals of the pride of the collection is a magnificent Auriferous specimen of spear-ite, a variety of garnet that seldom provides stones large and clear enough for jewelry purposes. Weighing over six karats and beautifully cut in the modern fashion, the stone stands practically alone in the literature of gems.
The collection includes the most varied series of zircons in existence, and there are also excellent assortments of tourmalines, topazes, emeralds, opals, and spinels. Opals include two fine stones of jet black color.
The museum trustees have decided to store the collection for the present in a place where it will be safe from war and Zeppelin risks, and it will therefore not be exhibited until after the war.

TWO RULERS WITHOUT KINGDOMS IN EUROPE
King Peter of Serbia is in Same Plight as the King of Belgium.
—Peter a Dramatic Figure.
Vienna, Dec. 30.—There is a second king in Europe without a kingdom as a result of the war. Peter of Serbia is today no better off than the king of the Belgians. Karageorgovich is fugitive before the advance of the central powers and Bulgarian troops. His two capitals, Belgrade and Nish, are in the hands of the invaders. For a time King Peter traveled in a special train. At Krusevatch he had to abandon his movable court. As he stood in the station building of that town and waited for the automobile that was to take him to other parts, tears streamed down his cheeks. One of his dwindling entourage murmured a few comforting words, but to these King Peter merely nodded. Today he is said to be on his way to Scutari, Albania.
In many respects King Peter is the most dramatic figure of the European war. Two regicides are intimately connected with his history, the murder of his predecessor, Alexander, and the assassination of his queen, Draga, and the assassination of the Archduke of Austria, the Dual Monarchy's heir presumptive. There are those who claim that King Peter is one of two plots, that, indeed, he was the instigator of the former. How true this is would be hard to say in the absence of more evidence than has so far been produced. Certain it is that King Peter showed no inclination to be severe with the regicides in either the past or the present. He even managed to be on good terms with Mac Kitch, a Russian victim of the crime in the old Konak of Belgrade thirteen years ago.
Peter Karageorgovich never forgot, and he has permitted to forget, that he had taken the place of a man who had been foully murdered. Only a few sovereigns consented to meet him, and he was always so ill at ease in the presence of strangers that he usually shunned them.
King Peter's family, it is said, is of Gypsy origin. The original Karageorgovich, or "son of Black George," was a shepherd. King Peter himself spent much of his life in Switzerland, where the summons to Serbia's ill-fated throne reached him. Shortly after his election to the throne, Peter entered into close relations with the Russian crown. A large annual revenue was settled upon him with the understanding that in all matters affecting Serbia's foreign policy he was to keep Russia in mind. The attitude of the Serbian liberal party made such a course by Russia the establishment of a republic in Serbia after Alexander and Draga had been murdered. This, and the fact that the liberals in those days were not the ancient pan-Slavists which they became later, recommended the enforcement of the Serbian crown financially. In Petrograd it was felt that the king needed a reliable agent in the Balkans, and could be overlooked there that experiments in republicanism by a Slav people were not calculated to make life for the Romanoff dynasty easier. For twelve years Peter drew his Russian revenues and, it is asserted, never lost an opportunity to serve in return. The arrangement made Serbia a veritable ally of Russia, and, so far as the European war has progressed, proved Serbia's undoing. Whether or not King Peter will ever rule in Serbia is hard to say at this moment; in the central powers the belief, of course, is that Serbia and its king are no more.

HURT IN ARGUMENT; IS DENIED AWARD
Industrial Commission Lays Down Rule Relative to Injuries Incurred in Employees' Scorpas.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Dec. 30.—Two decisions of far-reaching effect relating to the conduct of employees have been announced by the industrial commission. In one compensation was asked for as the result of injuries received by an employee, and in another an employee was injured while scolding with an employer. In both cases compensation was denied.
John Blank and William Meyer were both employed by the Kohler company of Sheboygan. Blank was very pro-German in his sympathies and many of the other employees took occasion to stir up his feelings. One day when Meyer came to the section of the shop where Blank was working, the latter demanded an explanation as to why he came into that room of the shop. Instantly there was a fight. Meyer struck Blank on the head with a templet and then ran. An operation was later had without relief and soon thereafter Blank died. His widow then brought an action for damages.
"The injuries to Blank were not an industrial accident, though it did occur within an industrial plant," says the decision of the industrial commission. "The applicant's point of view and interest the most that can be said is that it resulted from a feud between the deceased and Meyer over matters wholly foreign to the duties of his employment. We think the facts fairly show that Blank was the aggressor and that the injuries necessarily resulted from the acts of Meyer in defending against the attacks of Blank. The application is dismissed."
Somewhat similar was the case of Arthur Spill of Menomonee Falls against the Wisconsin Telephone company. He was injured in a scuffle with other employees. The commission found that he was not performing service for the company incidental to the employment and dismissed the case. In the case of Bertha Bellin of Appleton against the Interstate Pulp & Paper company of Appleton, the commission awarded death benefit of $3,000 payable at the rate of $9.37 a week.

Whitewater News

Whitewater, Dec. 30.—The "Young Americans," an organization of boys which has been running for several years, and was started from seventh grade boys of the Whitewater school, held their annual banquet Sunday evening at the Hotel Walworth. The boys have become somewhat scattered and only eight out of four hundred were present. Ten other young men were invited to enjoy the festivities of the evening with them. After the banquet the business meeting followed. It was decided to reorganize the society and the present members be the nucleus of a larger society to be called the Y. A. association. The following officers were elected: President, Edward O'Connor; Vice-president, George Zull; Secretary and Treasurer, William Ryan. The boys then enjoyed a social time in the hotel parlor, singing college songs and exchanging stories. The evening ended with a musical performance and some excellent music for the boys.

The class of 1914 of the Whitewater high school held its first annual reunion at the high school building Tuesday evening. Out of the twenty-seven graduates of that year twenty-two were in attendance. Miss Edna Lewis gave an illustrated lecture on the San Francisco exposition. Dinner was served and the evening spent in music. Miss Lucile Zelle and Miss Mable Exner of Milwaukee, are visiting at Mrs. Chas. Bientfang's for a few days. Miss Omer Knigst and Miss Frances Knight spent Christmas in Evanston.

Mrs. Mattie Fellows is visiting relatives in Lyons City, Iowa. She will be gone about a month. On her return she will visit in Clinton and Rockford.

'Y' MEN ANNOUNCE; OPEN HOUSE JAN. 1

Big Plans Arranged for New Year's Day—Program Minutes to Fill Every Minute.

Arrangements have all been completed for the "open house" at the Young Men's Christian association building on New Year's day. The activities are to open at ten o'clock and continue without interruption until well along in the evening. Incidentally, the association officials are urging every citizen and boy and girl of the city to come to the building and thoroughly make themselves at home. At ten o'clock the morning program is scheduled to commence with a program for the boys' division. The finals in the pocket billiard tournament are scheduled to be run off. Considerable interest has been manifested in this match and the kids are having an excellent time as a result. In addition there is going to be a tournament on the table tennis and a boxing match. It is safe to assure that some of the boxing heads will be completely surprised as to the maneuvers to which their opponent can make the ivory balls respond.

A list of various stunts will open the afternoon's program at two o'clock and continue until four. William Pond is scheduled to present an exhibition of Indian club swinging. Miss Manilla Powers, soloist, will appear in several vocal numbers during the afternoon. There is also going to be a quartet in addition to Miss Powers. The final in the boxing match is already proving a drawing card and with such other activities the afternoon is bound to be one of pleasure.

At four o'clock the Methodist church girls are to meet the Baptist girls at basketball. A keen rivalry has sprung up between the quintets of young ladies and considerable games are expected. Reports today from the camps of either team tend to indicate that the score is going to be low with the best team having the most number of points when the last girl's hair has lost its pins.

After the girls finish their game the first team is to clash with the all stars, a five composed of the high school and other players. Following this there will be a program of gymnasium stunts to fill in the earlier portion of the evening.

Everything is going to be free during the evening, from 7:30 to 10:30 o'clock. Bowling alleys, pool and billiard tables, gymnasium and swimming pool are to be thrown open to the public. It is announced today that ladies and gentlemen are cordially invited to come and spend the evening at the building.

H. J. Center, head of the boys' department, today announced that a special program had been arranged for high school boys who work and who are unable to get into the regular classes. The idea will be in beginning next week. On Tuesday evening these boys are to be granted special gym privileges from 7:00 to 8:00 o'clock. On Wednesday a shower and bath room for the next hour, and special social privileges from 8:00 to 9:30 o'clock. All Bible classes are to revert back to old activities. The high school boys' class will open with their supper on Tuesday evening.

PIDGIN ISLAND

Sol The lonely telegraph operator was one of the three or four villagers who did not gossip. Doctors, pawnbrokers and telegraph operators seldom ever betray confidences. Yet this op-

"Di, is it you?"

er would have given a month's wages to confide to his family the highly advanced in his dingy shop of this mysterious young woman.

"Tonight he shook his head as usual. 'Nothing tonight, miss.'"

"You are sure you understand the instructions?"

"Yes, miss. Any message from a man named Smead to another named Hanchett to be delayed twenty-four hours. I'm kind of worried. Your specific orders from headquarters?"

"Might be a forgery."

Diana smiled. From the inner pocket of her outfit coat she produced a document. "Read this and quiet your nerves."

His eyes widened.

"I guess if they'll back you down there in Washington I can. Excuse me for a moment." The key was taken. He sat down and took the message.

When he rose from the board he was smiling. "A night message from your man, Hanchett, Hotel Carlton," he read. "Pidgin today, come at; weather permitting." It was unsigned.

"It is what I have been waiting for. Thank you. Good night."

By the time the operator had sealed the denomination of the bill the giver had disappeared.

She listened toward the town limits. A black beyond the telegraph office at her outside the are light zone. The light was only start, and when the sidewalk ended she took to the road, stepping cautiously till her eyes became accustomed to the dark, the difference between substance and shadow.

With that remarkable abruptness with which at night one shadow emerges from another she saw before her the vague outline of a man. He was walking swiftly in her direction. He passed.

"Di?"

At the sound of that voice, even though she had expected hourly to see it, an incipient paralysis held her. The solid dark seemed to break from under her, leaving her in idleness.

"Di, is it you?"

Useless to run.

"What are you doing up here?" the man asked impetuously and at once to the advantage of the terror his appearance had inspired in her.

This demand from the man she had not once in six years, from whom she had hidden with unflinching vigilance, yet always keeping track of him, called anew the old fires in her heart. Anger, pity, wonder and con-and smooth.

He knew women, this handsome rogue; knew the hearts of them as a violinist knows the strings of his instrument—upon which string to play this moment or that, what tempo upon the dry and taut, the damp and loose.

Here were taut strings, necessitating a light, soft touch of the bow. Always he had found it to be so—when woman's voice rang high with emotion man's voice should gentle her—or when hers was low and throbbing man's should suddenly dominate.

He was without rather an unusual young man, depending for every move he made upon the mathematics of chance. "You may think I have no right, Di; yet I have, even if ever so little."

"Not one iota, Donald Smead."

"Mr. Hanchett—Mr. Hanchett, if you please!"

"I wonder under how many names you have gone in these six years?"

"A good many, Di."

"And how many lies have you told to other poor women?"

"Count the planets. I have often marveled over the breeding quality of the first lie. A stone upon still waters who knows where the ripples end?"

"When first we practice to deceive! There's a deal of truth in those old clumps, the poets. Well, lying came naturally. As other lads were taught: patriotic odes from fourth readers, I was taught to lie. Lord, but I'm accomplished! What are you doing up here in this God forsaken hole?"

"It is not God forsaken!"—quietly.

"Perhaps it is my outlook. To me all places are more or less God forsaken. After all, Di, I have some excuses."

"Once upon a time you had—not now."

"You think, then, that I've had my chance?"

"I know it. I tried to help you. There was a time when I would have given my heart's blood to help you, but you lied to me and tricked me."

"And now?" He crushed the eagerness which sprang with the question.

"I would not turn my hand to save you from prison." She uttered the words without heat.

He knew that she meant it.

"That, as my beloved father would say, is a haymaker dash on the jaw. What an old prize fighter he must have been! Di, in your heart you know you wouldn't let me go to prison."

"I would. It might be the saving of you."

"Dear little Methodist—or is it Presbyterian? Repentance? What a word, smuggest of the smug; rolling eyes, clasped hands and lying lips!"

"Do you never think? Do these things never return to haunt you—the broken lives, the knavery, the dishonesty?"

"I don't believe in ghosts, Di. Besides, it is easy to shoo them away."

"You are really incapable of telling the truth."

"Well, yes—sometimes they come knocking."

"They follow from room to room; bolts and oak panels are nothing, but presently I remember where the whiskey stands on the sideboard, and poof! they go scrambling under the way they came."

"And when the horror of drunkenness is gone?"

"Oh, then it's morning; sunshine, and work to do. I wish I could see your face." He struck a match.

She did not flinch. The flame burned till it nipped his thumb and finger, then he dropped the writhing stick to the ground, where it glowed a moment and went out. "Good nerves, Di. Not afraid of anything, are you?"

She did not answer.

"Well, then never was any cowardice on your side or mine."

"Moral?"

"Physical. I have the courage of my crimes, you the courage of your virtues. Oh, dear Diana!" He laughed.

"Do you realize that you are one of the two living things I love?"

"The other?"

"Irony, eh? Myself, you would suggest? No. Truth is, Di, I despise myself as heartily as you do."

Quickly he caught her by the shoulders. "What is this man Cranford doing? Is he making love to you?"

Answer? He shook her.

She put her strong fingers under his and swung him back.

"Ah! You love him?"

"Don't touch me again, Donald," she said quietly.

"There's a long score against him. Well, well, if hurt comes to him, do not put all the blame on me. I'm not alone. The pater is in Kingston. If he had his way Cranford would go out to sea, drifting. I told him I saw you. Rotten old world! Do you really hate me?" he added.

"I hate the life you lead."

"Never coming back?"

"Never."

He swung about abruptly, the shadows filled in behind him, and he was gone.

CHAPTER XII.

A Will Drawn Up.

DIANA never could tell how she got back to the farm.

One of her knees throbbed painfully, for somewhere along the road she had stumbled and fallen.

In bed she could not shut her eyes. The voice of the man had awakened the half forgotten terrors of the past.

The peace and serene happiness of the white walled convent, the beautiful gardens, such as only Europe has had time to prepare and fulfill, and in her innocence she had dreamed that the world outside the huge iron gates was a grand fairy story waiting to be read.

Then into the world, the great house with its paintings and rugs and tapestries and marbles; the coming of the young men, of middle aged men, of old men, and the fever of card playing; her beautiful gowns and gems, and the vaguely growing wonder why the men never brought their wives with them, and then came the thunderbolt.

A young man much in wine had thrown his arms about her in the hall and kissed her. Her indignation, his laughter, the terrible revelation.

"Oh, come now! Don't be a prude. Do you suppose we chaps would come here but for a chance to see you and talk with you? God in heaven, you mean to tell me you do not know that this is a private gambling house? The low, abominable scoundrels!"

From her varied wardrobe she had chosen the simplest hat and gown, taken only the money in her purse and fled.

It was almost as if she had fled with her hands to her ears and her eyes shut. The gradual disillusioning from which humanity draws its experiences and profit was denied her.

It had bent down upon her with the suddenness of an anathema. For days after there had been mental numbness. Dry eyed and trance-like she had gone from place to place for work. God forgive them; never would she.

Began the battle with the world.

Warned, she learned quickly how to deal with men and half men and beasts—learned to hold them off at arm's length without repelling them, to meet rebuff with firmness and gentleness, harshness with patience, guile with disarming honesty. The fairy story she had dreamed of reading there behind the convent grille was a grimy tale. In these toiling six years many had been her occupations—shop-girl, stenographer, nurse, governess, companion to old ladies, stewardess on the Atlantic liners which she still followed ostensibly, but in reality as a blind for a more daring business.

And now the hurt she had always succeeded in eluding had finally come. Here in this quiet, low ceiling room she faced it honestly.

She cared more for this comparative stranger than was wise, and the issue was how to leave him, to forget him and make him forget in turn.

Quarter after 10.

Steward is playing solitaire and pausing from time to time abstractedly, for here and there the face of a card dissolves and a vision comes instead.

Cranford is smoking his pipe, and in the billows of peaty smoke visions. In the hotel barroom the man who calls himself Hanchett has his visions. To the young, and eyed woman in Watertown visions troop back and forth past her star enameled window. Visions surge about the pillows of the young woman in the farmhouse.

Quarter after 10.

In a house in the great city a clock in a hallway struck the quarter hour.

The soft boom of it penetrated all the lower rooms of the big house. By the library reading table the gray haired man laid down his newspaper and looked at his watch.

"Wonderful how that old clock keeps time," he said to the white haired woman opposite. "Hundred and fifty years old, and yet it is still as accurate as this Swiss piece."

He returned the watch to his pocket and was about to resume his reading when he saw something sparkle on the cheeks of the woman. "What's the matter, Jane?"

She dabbed at her cheeks with her handkerchief and fumbled the leaves of her book. "Nothing."

"Nonsense! That's not the truth. What's troubling you?" kindly.

"That which is always troubling me," bravely, since she knew it must be said.

The man's features seemed to draw together almost imperceptibly.

The eyes narrowed; the nostrils, the lips became pinched. She could hear the long drawn breath.

"You are always thinking of her."

"I can't help it. She is flesh of my flesh, blood of my blood. I am her mother."

"And am I not her father?"

She smiled wilyly. "That is not quite the same thing."

"You are without a stick of pride."

"No, not I have pride, but it is the pride of pity, the pride of love. I cannot crush out either at command from you. It is five years since you denied her."

"Ah!" He was one of those men whose faces grow white when angered. All the blood went with a rush to his heart, leaving his mind clear and cold. "I have told you never to mention her. I have no daughter."

"I have. And oh, I think of her at night! Where is she? Is she dead, alive, in misery? She, too, has pride, for she has never written but once."

"I tell you I have no daughter."

"And I repeat I have. And if I did not depend upon you for my bread and better I would seek and find her. In my heart I have never forsaken her."

"She is still more to you than I ever was."

"No. Since that day when you ceased to be my lover. Money and pomp and false pride have robbed me of both my daughter and my lover."

He sat down. "This seems to be a crisis, Jane. He spoke gently now."

"I want her."

"Listen. Was I the tyrant, the ogre? Did I ever deny her anything in reason? Did I not do my duty in laying all the facts before her and proving them—that the man was a youthful blackleg, a gambler, a handsome scoundrel, the son of one of the greatest rascals in the state? God knows it was not that she had chosen as her lover a poor young man, honest."

He paused passionately.

"I know as well as you do that love is something we cannot harness and drive. But in the face of all these facts she ran away and married him. I have spoken. I disowned my daughter the day she disowned me, for that's what she did, and so long as I live she shall not enter this house. When I am dead and gone you may do as you see fit with my money. I make no reservations."

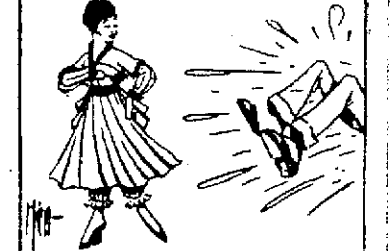

"She may be hungry and cold."

sheet. "That," replied the precocious youth, "is what I'd do if I had $50,000."

"Hefty," rebelliously cried the vicar's nine-year-old daughter, "am I ever going to have a new frock? That's the worst of being the youngest—I've got to wear every one else's cast-off dresses!"

"You're a very naughty girl, Caroline," reproved the elder sister. "You seem to forget that father's got to keep eight of us on very little money."

"It's always the same," sniveled the baby of the family, as she flounced out of the room. "Can't have this, can't have that, can't have anything in the house."

Smack she bumped into the vicar himself.

"Crying?" he inquired. "I've splended news. A dear little baby sister has arrived!"

Having delivered his bombshell, he stood back to see the effect.

Caroline pulled herself together quickly.

"Well, papa," she said, disgustfully, "I suppose it can't be helped now, but I do think there were a lot of other things we needed more!"

"It's a scandal the way women dress nowadays. Our grandmothers never wore any such immodest garments."

"Perhaps not, but I'd be willing to bet that our grandfathers made just as big a fuss over the things they did wear as you men do about the present styles."

Optimistic Thought.

DUTCH MARINE CORPS IN ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] The Hague, Dec. 29.—The Dutch marine corps, popularly known in the Netherlands as "Soldiers and Sailors Too," celebrated the 250th anniversary of its formation at Willemsoord on December 10. Although the corps has had a history of gallant deeds in every quarter of the globe, the celebration was held under the cloud of possible disembarking of there is an inclination in official circles to abolish the corps altogether in the near future, as its usefulness is believed to have disappeared under modern conditions of naval warfare. Gradual reduction of the number of officers has been going on for some time and for several years no appointment to the commission rank has been made. The marines, however, have been maintained at a high state of efficiency, and among the Dutch people they are more popular than any other troops.

It was in the days of the famous Dutch Admiral De Ruyter that the corps came into existence. Only two years later, in 1667, the corps took part in the Dutch naval victory on Chatham in England. For two and a half centuries since their daring exploits have included the Spanish war of succession against the French at Cadix; the storming of Gibraltar in alliance with the British marines in 1704; the capture of Barcelona; and battles in Spain against the French at Madrid, Alicante and Saragossa. For many years they fought in the Dutch colonies, suppressing native uprisings, and in colonial expeditions against England and France. It was in the latter campaign that the Dutch marines were forced to capitulate after a hard fight at the Cape of Good Hope in 1806, and South Africa thus fell into British hands. Since the beginning of the last century, except for the Belgian revolution in 1830, the Dutch marines have been employed solely in navy duty and colonial wars, but they have scarcely ever been idle.

OPEN SALOON ISSUES WINS MAN SEAT IN PARLIAMENT.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] London, Dec. 30.—One of the side shows in British politics has been the violation of the political truce by a candidate contesting a seat in parliament on the single issue of the open saloon. Reginald Knight, whose defeat was early foreseen, did not fight so much as champion of the open saloon as for the liberties which he claimed went with the open saloon. Liberty, freedom, self-respect, self-reliance and the right of the social habits of the people to live were his catchwords. Even the beer and distilling trade was not responsible for Knight's candidacy, and he did not even endorse him. Knight himself had the name of being a sincere and a rather simple minded man, with a good record for usefulness in public life.

When the House of Commons carried the liquor hours of the Cleveland parliamentary division in Yorkshire, the miners were inclined to take it as a personal affront. Some of the union officials denounced it as class legislation. Knight was quick to take advantage of this discontent and announced himself as candidate for the seat which chanced to become vacant at this time.

Opposing Knight was Herbert Samuel, M. P., the postmaster general, who under the compromise made between the regular parties when the coalition cabinet was formed, should have retained his place without a contest. Samuel's victory was easy.
